In the shadows of the Vietnam War, the CIA conducted a secret war in Laos that relied on Hmong soldiers to prevent the threat of communism from spreading deeper into Southeast Asia. A brand new collection of resources based on the Twin Cities PBS documentary America’s Secret War empowers educators to bring this story into their classrooms in fresh and engaging ways.

First-person storytelling, interactive maps, and accessible guides make themes like service, sacrifice, justice, and freedom relevant for all of us. Activities also embrace concepts of the Humanities Center’s approach to engagement through absent narratives- those voices often left out or marginalized- with the goal of helping students engage others with respect and empathy.

www.mnvietnam.org/educator-resources

This education toolkit was prepared by Chong Thao, a high school English Language Arts teacher for Saint Paul Public Schools, Thown Va Thor, a middle school social studies teacher at New Millennium Academy, Michael Paulson, a high school social studies teacher for Intermediate District 287, and Chia Xiong, an elementary teacher at Roseville Area Schools, in partnership with TPT and the Minnesota Humanities Center.

To access this guide and additional resources to support teaching about America’s Secret War, visit mvnvi etnam.org/resources/

© 2019 TPT and Minnesota Humanities Center
ABOUT AMERICA’S SECRET WAR

While the United States was publicly engaged in the Vietnam War, a secret conflict was raging just next door in the country of Laos. Under the command of the CIA, a full-blown military operation engulfed Laos, with a select few of the U.S. Armed Forces participating. At Long Tieng, a secret airbase in the heart of Laos, the CIA trained an army of allied guerilla fighters including a large number of the Hmong people (an ethnic group from the mountainous regions of southern China, Vietnam, Laos, Myanmar and Thailand), to assist in destroying enemy supply lines.

The hour-long documentary AMERICA’S SECRET WAR uncovers the history of this covert war through the stories of Hmong elders and a rich collection of never-been-seen archival images, maps, and documents, including recently declassified CIA intelligence.

Highly personal testimonials from world-renowned diplomat Dr. Yang Dao; Hmong scholars Lee Pao Xiong and Dr. Mai Na M Lee; Special Guerilla Unit soldiers; nurses; and second generation family members paint a vivid portrait of life in Laos during the war.

Their stories also detail the harrowing run for their lives after the fall of Saigon and Cambodia, as members of the enemy organization Pathet Lao hunted them down. Many narrowly escaped to Thai refugee camps by hiding in the jungles, sometimes for months, without food, and crossing the two-mile wide Mekong River in the dead of night on anything that would float. Their journey continued in and out of multiple refugee camps and then to the United States, where a new and unfamiliar life was waiting for them in places like St. Paul, Minnesota and Fresno, California.

The film underscores that the Secret War — unacknowledged by the CIA until 1994 — was and is an integral part of the Vietnam War’s history, a history that is still only partly (and only very recently) recognized. Although they are now U.S. citizens, Hmong veterans of the Secret War do not qualify for veterans’ medical benefits.

Like a brilliantly colored Hmong Paj Ntaub story cloth tapestry, this documentary illustrates the journey to a new life. It’s an invitation to walk in another man’s shoes and to remember, honor and understand the Hmong experience.

A Twin Cities PBS Original
MNVietnam.org/americas-secret-war